Photo of courtesy: @ WeirldandTales / Twitter We have social media to thank for some of the most important revolutions of the modern era. Arab spring, occupying movement and even important fundraising collections such as #CEBucketchallenge would not have been successful without the help of social media. Other social media trends, however, have been completely ridiculous. Most of these trends come and go to a flash, but new silly trends have sprung up everywhere. Before taking your next selfie to Chernobyl, take a look at the most stupid trends to exist on social media. Needless to say, please do not try any of these ancient social media trends, as they don't make you more fresh (or safe). In the summer of 2019, 2 million Facebook users skipped on a virtual wheelhouse to temper the legendary area 51. The event, which eventually attracted the attention of government officials, has been removed from facebook after violating them Guidelines of the community of the site. Photo of courtesy: Christopher Morris / Corbis / Getty Images The American army released a threatening statement in front of the event, discouraging anyone to try to break an area in which they work the armed forces. The area 51 has remained an extraterrestrial mystery for decades, and it seems that the mystery will have to continue. This disturbing trend only requires your phone and a lack of privacy problems. All you have to do is a message of your "Neighbor Number" or "Neighbor Need Neighbor" and share your exchange on social media. Your "Number Number" is someone with a difference of a figure from your phone number. Foto Cortesy: Tammy McGary / Wikimedia Commons This sounds like a good important time, but it's not exactly a smart move. If your "Number Neighbor" is a minor and you are not, you are entering some territory from sayey. Also, not everyone wants to meet their "door of the next text", so you don't like the answer you get. In 2013, a Tumblr page launched in response to a bizarre trendy jason feifer writer noticed on vacation. While exploring the Anne Frank memorial, tourists of all ages were taking selfie in front of the historically significant position. It is so that selfie was born in serious places. Photo of courtesy: @ MLDSpot / Twitter highlighting the poor judgment behind these photos, the Tumblr page of Feiferer made selfies at concentration camps, funerals and Chernobyl the new Hrying-Deasy Internet FAD. These types of photos should not have been so publicly ridiculed, but at least behavior died as a result. The #Firechallenge of 2014 was one of the most dangerous and disastrous trends to invade social media. With the cameras that roll, the participants willingly cover in a flammable liquid and then put themselves on fire. Firefighters, police officers and social media sites have to report publicly the practice of protecting public security. Photo of courtesy: @ SFDDToyprogram / Twitter Unfortunately, this challenge has suffered and led to serious damage. A 12 year old girl suffered severe burns after trying the challenge with her friends. A teenager described post-burning as "unbearable". Please, if you are reading this, don't put yourself on flames for views. It is very dangerous and very stupid. This cute but foolish way to deceive your pets has returned to the summer of 2018. All you needed was a blanket and your cat's dog or attention to play. Simply raise the blanket in front of your pet, let them know that you are right behind it and then drop the blanket while you rush into another room. Foto Cortesy: Christiand / Twitter is a quick-to-and-switch rapid make-up Countless animals outside the guard. Personally speaking, the best videos highlights animals that could not worry less than the joke at their spending. The real joke was on the person who makes the video, as a spectator, is much more satisfying than a scared kitten. Paccp for the first time was viral in 2017 and the first adapters were instantly linked to his age altering Photoshop's abilities. In 2019, Celebs jumped on board and 80 million users in the #faceAppchallenge. Then going viral is a good result for an app, but FaceApp fell prey to a dangerous voices on the internet early after its second wind. Photo of courtesy: @ Riavrealed / Twitter according to a viral tweet, a web developer warned users that the Russian app agreement allowed access to all the phone photos. Even the photos you didn't use in the app. This has given the app a dangerous reputation and the relationships of the inaccuracy of the tweet were much more peaceful at the end of the raw feared by fear. This challenge, which actually traces up to 2001, is a bizarre abuse of a delicious spice. The challenge is simple: movie alone eating a spoonful of cinnamon in less than a minute without drinking something to help. After the cough and / or vomiting, they load the messy sheet online. Photo of courtesy: @ Da MF MOON / Twitter The point of the challenge is to look at people cross the terrible pain to the throat like the cinnamon coats and dry their mouths. Most people end up spitting a cloud of tanning powder in pain and hopefully question their life choices after. Don't make this trend. It has the potential to cause long-term respiratory difficulties, pneumonia or a collapsed lung. In 2012, American DJ Baueuer released his debut, the uptempo dance track "Harlem Shake." It was a captivating mixture of trap, dance and dance music, but did not take forward up to almost a year later. The reason? People have started to load clips on YouTube of themselves bothering in the song. Photo of courtesy: @ Morganemily13 / Twitter The Meme Harlem Shake Meme was quite simple to replicate. All you do is the film a quiet room with people who look busy or bored and then they crazy when the rhythm falls. After Billboard started incorporating the songs of YouTube of the songs in their classification system, Baueuer launched at point number 1. In 2015, Reality TV Star Kylie Jenner's reality seemed very different. A lot of spectators looked to her grow from the moment she was small, so she was surprising to see her on red carpets with a new set of lips. Photo courtesy: @ Fans of Kyliejenner / Twitter, the followers of social media and the media mock them to alter the appearance of her to such a young age. But then people tried to replicate the perkier port of her participating in #kyliejennerchallenge. First, take a glass, then put it on your lips and sucks. The doctors do not recommend doing it because I would break the blood vessels around your mouth. This peculiar trend has been around decades, but the planking has been captured for the first time the attention of social media in 2009. Suddenly, everyone was sharing photos of themselves to face already in bizarre and difficult places to reach. More bizarre the location, the better is the photo of planking. Photo of courtesy: Teerina / Wikimedia communicates the tendency captured in an important way. The Prime Minister of New Zealand John Key was in front of his brooch son, Max, and made the first page of New Zealand Herald. He was immediately addressed to "kill the meme". He turns out that you cannot be a powerful leader with a sense of humor. The trick and the artistic body are main players on Instagram. Having a Bedazzled belly or an opaque foundation can make you earn some serious follower, but in 2015, TrendSetter took the body art at a completely new level. People strategically put solar cream on some parts of their bodies while letting other parts burn. The result? #Sunburnart Photo courtesy: @ CBSeveningNews / Twitter is solar burning for the first time arrive twice: You can see someone falling and someone else turns to look surprised by the person who fell on purpose. I hate look like a buzzkill, but someone has to clean up after your stupid joke, and more likely it's someone else. That is rude. Also, again, don't waste food. This could be the most dangerous type of selfie there outside. Selfie of skyscrapers require someone to resize the highest buildings and engage in extremely dangerous photo shoots. Sometimes indicated as "coverage", this trend has really been captured in Russia and Asia. Photo of courtesy: @ Mongoose115 / Twitter Angelina Nikolau made a name for itself on social media thanks to the innumerable sheths of the skyscraper around Eastern Europe and Asia. This trend is not for the faint of heart, or for anyone who gets the appreciated hands while watching the selfie of the other skyscraper. You know you saw a flash mob. From their debut in 2003, it is likely that you even participated in them. They are viral dance routines in the middle of Times Square. They are the choreographed marriage proposals in the 3-depot Hall 3 corridor. They are viral video clips on social media in which a large group of people gathers up to do something completely random and then leave immediately after. Photo of courtesy: Scott Barbour / Getty Images Perhaps the most incredible thing about Flash Mobs is that they are still happening. Social media trends have a conservation duration of about three days, so it was wild see Flash Mob in 2019 out in nature. Since they have become great tools for the main protests, since bizarre behavior can be exploited to call attention to worthy causes. Drake has a lot of people to thank the success of the success of him 2018 "in mine Don't hurt us, it's a certified BOP". But it wasn't until the #InnuFeelingSChallenge went viral that the song of him seasoned the rankings. Photo of courtesy: @ WPLGLOCAL10 / Twitter Here's how it works: While someone driving (and film) the passenger goes out of the moving machine, leaving the door open so that they can begged to Keke as drake. There are so many dangerous clips of this viral trend that pass catch that the signs of the motorway went by encouraging people to stay in in cars. The game is simple: every person takes a turn pushing a marshmallow in the mouth and saying: "Bunny chubby". This goes on until your mouth is stuffed, it can't keep marshmallows anymore. Or until you can any more "Chubby Bunny". Photo of courtesy: CC BY-SA 3.0 / Wikimedia Commons This stupid trend can become disordered, so be aware of any clothes you wear. Also - don't suffocate on marshmallows. Anyone who came with this game is still a mystery, but there was a 1959 comedian of peanuts where Snoopy looked at the mouth with marshmallows. I'm just saying. This is another bizarre case of "teenagers do the most stupid things". Parents and medical sector professionals were in 2018 when children on social media were doing a condom Snowing challenge. The trend is exactly as it sounds, and yes, it's absolutely stupid to do. Photo of courtesy: AFP / Getty Images according to doctors, the biggest risk is that snap-in condoms can be an important danger of suffocation. As terrible as it seems, it real estate while the camera moves around them. Everyone looked like mannequins. Photo of courtesy: Husam Abualshaikh / Wikimedia Commons which was sufficient inspiration for social media, and the #Mannochinchallenge was born. People in all were putting their own video versions together with music in the background. Millions of views later, Rae Sremmurd took place by a # 1 song on the graphs of the billboards. Do you know where your teen is sleeping? If they are trying to complete the challenge for 24 hours a day, then the answer is likely "No." This is the point of the challenge: teenagers and young adults in 2016 started camping overnight in chains of shops and restaurants. Photo of courtesy: @ DobreMarcus / Twitter all you have to do is sneak before closing time and hide unnoticed until the next day. This is another trend of social media that parents do not approve, since children are doing them without permission to their parents. A 11-year-old boy from Great Britain, for example, caused a massive police hunt in 2018, but it appears that he was settling in an Ikea. In 2015, people needed a new way to irritate their cats. Enter cats against cucumbers. The premise is quite simple: while your cat is committed to eating or licking himself, he positions a cucumber just outside his vision line. When he catches a look, hopefully, you have your camera running. Photo of courtesy: @ HelepieteRexe / Twitter Sometimes cats jump into terror. Other times, nothing happens. But should you do it to your pet? The behavioral cat experts have weighed, saying that frightened animals with their feeding areas can lift them out and cause harmful and long-term damage to what I feel safe. Again, stop joking with your pets! This trend of social media was all about extravagance. And looking wounded. To get the right photo, all you had to do was seem like you were flat on your face with your goods scattered around you. It started in Russia and evolved into a competition to show how incredibly rich you were. Photo of courtesy: @ ClairesBetty / Twitter in the end, it took the world of Storm social media and the least lucky has put own turn on the trend. Instead of showing clothing and jewelry of the designer, people will show objects that they spoke more at their character. That, compared to self-mutilating challenges, it sounds much more pleasant. At the beginning, this trend came from a good place. At least that is Beauty Blogger and #Dontjudgechallenge Creator Em Ford's Story. In a 2015 clip from its youtube channel, the blogger cancels the trick to reveal its real ses in an attempt to denounce the beauty standards. Photo of courtesy: @ Maddystarkell / Twitter His healthy, "not" not A book from the cover "Attivo has gone viral, but social media have quickly transformed the trend into garbage. Instead of publishing potential photos and videos, people instead have seemed more ugly by drawing on false unbroows, acne and freckles. Hashtag was, unfortunately, hirted by burriquors. This is a classic case of web hysterias and parents who do not speak enough with their children. According to news reports in 2019, Challenge Momo was a game on social media where I Images of a demonic chicken lady slips in your son's DMS with commands to commit violence against others. Photo of courtesy: @ Elementaryty / Twitter Social media representatives and web experts supported there were no evidence that no child was Pushed to violence from Mromo Momo. A bit of internet Sleuting later, the first image of Mrs Momo was found. It was not a demonic chicken lady who comes later your sons. It was a sculpture of art in 2016 by a Japanese artist. This 2016 trend had the potential to be dangerous ally. A person tries to cross two rows of people who throw all their backpacks to break down the runner. These chaotic clips were all the anger of high schoolchildren, but this challenge could have seriously hurt someone. Photo of courtesy: @ ALLI_JONES34 / Twitter Remember how heavy your textbooks were at high school? They were massive! It is honestly a surprise that we didn't have all scoliosis. Now imagine thirty backpacks full of heavy textbooks that are launched in your direction. Not the most pleasant (or intelligent) viral trend. This paranormal trend actually dates back many years. In Spain, multiple generations of young people played Juego de la Lapicera (pencil game). In 2015, he made his crossover to the states, he renamed the challenge #charliecharlie. All you need are two pencils and a piece of paper. Photo of courtesy: Yunshui / Wikimedia Commons Commons, Label four sections of the paper "Yes" or "No". Subsequently, two perpendicular pencils over the other is balanced, creating a grid. So ask Charlie, the supernatural entity all-wise, a question. The supernatural forces (or wind) will indicate the right answer. It is so magical as an 8-ball magic. This trend is also one of the most dangerous in this list. Dating back to the 1980s, the car surf is when someone jumps at the top of a moving car and pretends to ride it like a surfboard. This was when we say "don't do it!" Photo of courtesy: @ jess3rdcoast / Twitter According to the reports of the Centers for Disease Control, 58 deaths were associated with the car browsing between navigation between 1990 and August 2008. Adrenaline drugs and adolescents await, remain in Home of your car and stop trying to navigate by car. This food challenge is coarse for the nucleus. The challengers are in charge of eating two bananas quickly and following them with a liter of sprite. Here is where things become gross. Win the challenge if you don't vomit later. Photo of courtesy: Mr. Granger / Wikimedia Commons The challenge implies that the body cannot digest bananas and carbonated drinks at the same time. It is also possible that your body leved too quickly, resulting in vomiting. This challenge, like any other food challenge, is not a dish we would like to eat. to eat.
