Low dose naltrexone side effects weight

Hello to all. Lori Renee here. I was in low Naltrexone dose for about 2 weeks. It could be too early to publish on this drug, but I thought about posting today, and send again, in about 2-4 weeks. Bottom line is that at low dosage Naltrexone has greatly helped neuropathy with my foot. My pain has disappeared some time, and usually only reaches a level 5 or down there, sometimes. Usually, it is a 2-3, arose on a throbbing low level foot. Enough to be annoying, but not enough to want to cut your feet out. Without it, I wanted to cut my feet out. Certain problems do not remain, so my feet are far from still normal. I put the shoes, and I feel like my socks are piled, or that there are pebbles in them. It takes a long time to find a shoe to wear. The balls of my feet still feel like they were blocked in concrete, but not all the time. My fingers still feel blocked together, or too widely widespread. All crazy sensations of neuropathy. So Naltrexone at low dosage did not take all crazy. However, pain is so much lower, which are amazed. I only used Kratom once in two weeks, which is remarkable. I have no side effects to everyone from the drug. And it's not covered by my Medicare insurance, but it is about $ 35 a month. Not bad. In any case, it's really the best painkiller I searched, different from Kratom. I don't have to taste the Vile Kratom, so that it's very good. I suggest that everyone makes a try. I read that helps about 25% at a 6
